22 NOVEMBER 2026 - FEAST OF CHRIST THE KING

Jesus said to his disciples, 'When the Son of Man comes in his glory, and all the angels with him, then he will sit on his glorious throne. Before him will be gathered all the nations, and he will separate people one from another as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. ' (Matthew 25:31-32)

This weekend is the Feast of Christ the King, one of our two Nametag Sundays (along with the Feast of Pentecost) – a chance discreetly to learn the names of some of our fellow parishioners, not least that of the person whom you don't feel any longer you can ask…a community becomes a true community when we make an effort to imitate the God who calls each of us by our name….

A Warm welcome to the 11.15am Mass at St Mary Magdalene's to our P5 children coming together to celebrate their First Communion last May/June

Catholic Education Week – 'The annual special collection for Catholic Education Week takes place this weekend. This year's theme is To Know God, Love God and Serve God. The special collection supports

You can donate online at bit.ly/scottishcatholiceducation. Please read the pastoral letter from Archbishop Nolan attached or as a handout. The Archdiocesan Catholic Education Week Mass is at 11:00am on Thursday 26 November at St Mary's Cathedral.

And you get all that for free – no admission charge!
There will be opportunities to make donations and to buy raffle tickets, both on the night and beforehand.

And, of course, when you've bought your ticket, be sure to be at our star-studded evening of entertainment in St John's church on Friday 27 November to see your name being drawn out of the hat.
All the raffle money and donations will be going to wonderful causes -
Half the proceeds will go towards supporting the care plan for the St John's School cello teacher currently undergoing treatment for cancer, with the other half going towards helping the people of Nepal, particularly the children, after the terrible floods; the media may have lost interest but the recovery process will take a long time.

A New Youth Club for Our Parishes

Myriam Ares Gadea writes: 'St John's and St Mary Magdalene's are starting a new Youth Club for young people aged 12 to 17, and we would love parents to help shape it. I am organising the group and would love to hear your thoughts and suggestions about the needs you see in your children, and how a Youth Club could be of help to them. Our hope is that your children, and their friends, will want to join in: doing useful things for the community, learning something new, exploring their own interests and, of course, having fun together.
The Youth Club is also a space open to parents. Whether you would like to share an idea, teach a skill, help at a session or simply be involved in your own way, you are warmly welcome.
Please speak to me, Myriam, after Mass in the Church Hall or send me a WhatsApp on 07541 174840.'

Caring for Creation

Laudato Si' with Jane Mellett - The Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate's JPIC Commission is continuing its series of online workshops on the subject of "Caring for our Common Home". Jane Mellett, the facilitator, has extensive experience in teaching subjects relating to eco spirituality and Laudato Si', and a specific interest in how faith communities can contribute to addressing the environmental crises our world currently faces. Each of her workshops focuses on a section of Laudato Si': although the format is a series, participants are free to dip in and out of the workshops. There is one more session left in the year, on Tuesday 15 December, and it will take place on Zoom from 7 to 8:30 p.m. To sign up, email communications@oblates.ie or call/WhatsApp 05791160404, or you can complete this form: https://shorturl.at/yQB5z

Prayers for COP31 - COP31, the United Nations Climate Change Conference, ended on Friday 20 November, and with it came the final prayer in the series that Eco Congregation Scotland wrote for event attendees and the wider world. The final day's prayer, written out below, reflected on the entire event and the need to transform talking points into action. If you'd like to look at all the prayers, visit the Eco Congregation Scotland website: https://ecocongregationscotland.org/cop31-anatalya-100-words-today/

Dear God, we lift our hearts to you, mindful that across our doctrinal and political differences,
we know that we must change our ways
to ensure a quality of life which all can share,
and we need to provide hope for people of all ages,
everywhere, including future generations.

Eco tip - Scotland's energy bills are forecast to rise again from January, and while the Scottish Government is planning to replicate the UK Government's payment towards energy costs, not all of us will benefit from this. At this time of year in particular, many of us are thinking about how to keep warm – some small things you can do to keep the heat in at home (and be eco-conscious in your use of energy) are closing curtains as soon as the sun sets, keeping internal doors closed within your home, and using a towel to block draughts around doors and windows.

A Scarf for Lewy 2027 - Are there any knitters who would be interested in helping out this charity? An invitation from the Lewy Body Society inviting people throughout the UK to knit or crochet scarves for a major public awareness event at the Usher Hall in Edinburgh on Monday 19 April 2027.The individual scarves will be stitched together to form one enormous scarf around the venue, helping us start conversations about Lewy body dementia and show families affected by the condition that they are not alone. Taking part is deliberately straightforward, scarves can be knitted or crocheted, in any yarn, colour, pattern or stitch; any length, 30cm or approximately one foot, wide. People can contribute individually or work together as a group. https://www.lewybody.org/scarf-for-lewy-2027-edinburgh/

‘SAINT’ OF THE WEEK – Eberhard Arnold (1883-1935)

German Theologian, founder of the Bruderhof – Anniversary: 22 November

"In the name of Jesus Christ, we can die but not kill. This is where the Gospel leads us. If we really want to follow Christ, we must live as He lived and died. But this will not be clear to us until we understand how final His words are: You cannot serve God and mammon."

During the Reformation there were those who believed that Luther and Calvin and the churches they founded did not go far enough in recovering the radical spirit of Christianity. For one thing, they did not differ from the body of Christendom in their justification of violence, nor was there any appreciable difference in their attitude toward property. The so-called Radical Reformers, in contrast, wished to remake Christianity in the image of the Gospels and the early apostolic church. They stressed community, simplicity of life, and an uncompromising commitment to gospel nonviolence. As a result, they suffered persecution at the hands of Catholics and Protestants alike. Nevertheless, their spirit took root in such Anabaptist communities as the Hutterites and Mennonites, which continue to this day. And their ideals, though never in the mainstream, have shown the capacity to send occasional sparks flying across time and space.

One of those sparks landed on Eberhard Arnold, a young theologian in Germany in the 1920s. He was the son of a professor of church history who had been persuaded to follow a similar course of studies at the university. Though more inclined to study medicine, he had followed his father's wishes and eventually earned a doctorate from the University of Erlangen. Well might he have pursued a career as a professor of theology — a vocation which in Germany, more than most places, confers considerable prestige. Eberhard's only problem was that he took the gospel too seriously. He believed that before "professing" theology, it was more important to be a Christian. His study of the New Testament and Christian origins, furthermore, had led him to question the legitimacy of the state church. Increasingly he was attracted to the pure message of the Sermon on the Mount, which seemed to contain the essence of the gospel.

World War I, with its suicidal indulgence of nationalism and militarism, followed by the crippling postwar depression, impressed Arnold as a sign of the great gulf between the spirit of Jesus and the spirit of the times. Through lectures and writing he began to attract similar seekers. They formed a Bible study group that earnestly searched the Scriptures for answers about how to live a life of faithful discipleship. What would it mean to live by the Sermon on the Mount in the world today? Would it be possible really to live a life given over to the love of neighbour? To live in a spirit of poverty, to love one's enemies, to accept insecurity like the birds in the air, the lilies of the field? Gradually the idea formed of a new Christian community of families sharing all things in common, attempting to live the spirit of the Beatitudes in the world.

These were the origins of the Bruderhof (meaning "a place where brothers live"). Eberhard, his wife, Emmy, and their children, along with half a dozen other individuals, formed the nucleus of the original community. Rediscovering, in effect, the spirit of the sixteenth-century Anabaptists, the Bruderhof practiced adult baptism of believers. Members lived together, shared all property in common, and adhered to a code of peace and nonviolence. Inevitably, the community endured birth pangs. Not all were suited to such a radical commitment. At one point nearly everyone left and the community was again reduced to seven individuals. But by the early 1930s the community, based in a settlement in the Rhon mountains, had grown to over a hundred people. In 1930 they affiliated with the Hutterites in North America, a group that was in certain respects more conservative than the German Bruderhof, but with whom they felt a deep spiritual bond.

By this time Germany was experiencing the rise of National Socialism. To Arnold and his companions there could be no doubt of the evil tendencies unleashed with Hitler's rise to power. Members of the Bruderhof were immediately conspicuous for refusing to offer the obligatory salutation, "Heil Hitler." Clearly the spirit of the Bruderhof was fundamentally incompatible with the forces driving Germany.

On November 16, 1933, the Bruderhof community was surrounded by 140 armed men, including SS officers and the Gestapo. The community was thoroughly searched, and great quantities of books and writings were seized for examination. It was the beginning of a time of continuous scrutiny and harassment. The community was forbidden to receive overnight guests or to publish books or journals. An order was issued to close the Bruderhof school unless they accepted a government-appointed principal. Rather than comply, the community decided to smuggle all the school children out of the country to Switzerland. Next there arose the question of military service. Should young draft-age men stay in Germany and accept imprisonment for their pacifist stand? Or was it better to abandon Germany altogether? Ultimately, the community chose the latter. Otherwise, no doubt, they would have all eventually faced extermination.

Eberhard did not make the move. For some time, he had been crippled by a badly broken leg. In November 1935 he went into the hospital for surgery. Complications set in and he died some days later, on November 22, 1935.
This was not the end of the Bruderhof. Having survived sojourns in England and Paraguay, they went on to thrive in a network of communities in the United States. Supporting themselves by the manufacture of toys and equipment for the physically handicapped and by their publications, members of the Bruderhof continue to bear witness to the reign of God and to offer a window on a life patterned on the Sermon on the Mount.

Mother Julian of Norwich (1343-1417)

And in this he showed a little thing,
the size of a hazelnut,
lying in the palm of my hand,
as it seemed to me, and it was as round as a ball.
I looked at it
with the eye of my understanding,
and thought: What may this be?
And it was answered generally thus:
It is all that is made.
I marvelled how it might last,
for I thought it might suddenly fall to nothing,
it was so little.
And I was answered in my understanding:
It lasts and ever shall, for God loves it;
and so all things have being by the love of God.
In this little thing I saw three properties.
The first is that God made it,
the second that God loves it,
the third that God keeps it.
But what beheld I therein?
Verily, the maker, the keeper, the lover.

Pope Leo XIV's November Prayer

Lord of life,
all we have comes from You: the fertile land,
the talents we've received,
the effort of those who came before us.
Nothing is ours alone — everything is a shared gift.
But so often, Lord, we let the wealth we seek or attain
harden our hearts,
lock us in selfishness,
and make us forget the most vulnerable.

Forgive us for storing up instead of sharing,
for using goods as power rather than as service.
You remind us that true wealth is not found in what we keep,
but in what we give with love.
A heart detached from possessions
transforms the world:
it opens paths of justice,
tears down walls of indifference,
and sows hope among the poor.

We ask you, Lord, that your Spirit teach us to use what we have — money, time, talents, opportunities —
as instruments of fraternity.
May each economic, family, or community decision
spring from a free heart,
able to recognize that every good is meant for all,
and that only by sharing we build the future.
Make us witnesses of a wealth
transformed into service and mercy,
so that our lives, united to the lives of others,
may be a sign of your Kingdom of justice and peace.
Amen.
